McGill Still Undeterred By Financial Difficulties

Tito Bridges Gap Between East & West

by ANN WILSON

The West should play on Tito's fear of Russia and use him as best they can to bridge the gap between East and West, according to Professor Maxwell Cohen of McGill's Faculty of Law.

Speaking at a panel discussion on "Yugoslavia, Bridge between East and West?" held last night in Redpath Hall, Professor Cohen agreed with Claude Armand Sheppard, B.C.L. 4 that Yugoslavs feel only Tito can make an effective stand against the Soviet Union.

Professor Milos Mladenovic, Professor of History felt that the Titoist regime is a passive compromise between East and West. Tension between Russia and the Western democracies will always be an important feature in Yugoslavia's existence.

Sheppard, who attended the WUS seminar held last summer in Yugoslavia, thought that Titoism was a form of Communism which suited the country. The fierce pride of the Yugoslavs is to a certain degree satisfied by the development of local self-government in the commune.

WUS scholar Gordon Wasserman, B.A. 4, discussed the student attitude in Yugoslavia. The average student in Yugoslavia, brought up to believe that all pre-Tito governments were corrupt, and aware of his privileged position, is not likely to rise against the government, stated Wasserman.

Raises For Faculty Indicate Progress

McGill has succeeded in making substantial progress in spite of financial difficulties arising out of differences of opinion between Quebec and Ottawa in regard to financial grants.

This information was released in the annual university report for 1957-58 which was released yesterday.

The substantial progress is reflected in the improvement of physical facilities, including the building of Laird Hall of Residence at Macdonald College and the McConnell Engineering Building, both of which will be ready for next session, and the raising of teachers' salaries.

The university spent $3,300,100 for operation expenses during the current year. This was $339,926 more than available income and includes amounts spent to train 7,627 students and to maintain extensive hospital and research operations. Of the total sum spent, $9,513,606 was for academic activities — an average of $1,250 for each student.

Average salaries for professors went up from $8,789 to $9,517 and from $5,023 to $5,620 for assistant professors.

Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal and Vice-Chancellor, said in his section of the 200 — page report that it is becoming increasingly difficult to attract outstanding candidates for vacant posts at all ranks in the university.

He explained, however, "In spite of the steady increase in salaries at McGill University during the past years, the intensity of the competition among Canadian universities has raised the scales at other institutions even more rapidly.

"There can be no question of the urgent need for further salary increases at McGill."

DEPARTMENT REPORTS

Dr. James went on to explain that departmental reports emphasize that the number of teachers is not large enough to handle the work of the departments satisfactorily and that students have little direct contact with many of their teachers.

"The gravity of the problem has been accentuated by the fact that business and government have come to realize during the past 10 years or so that they can profitably use the kind of men whose knowledge and mental training would fit them for the teaching profession. The market for the talent has become highly competitive, and the intensity of the competition is likely to increase during the next few years."

Dr. James pointed out that McGill's problems are more serious than universities outside the province as it does not at present receive the grants made available to all Canadian universities by the Canadian Government.

"Outstanding young scholars and scientists — who must think of the economic comfort of wives and children, as well as their own professional careers, are being attracted from McGill to other institutions, and McGill finds it difficult (sometimes impossible) to replace them with candidates of equal quality.

"Speaking in realistic terms, this university must obtain more revenue if it is to increase salaries and wages."

PENSION PLAN

During the year under review, a modified pension plan was put into operation. Dr. James pointed out that "although the statutory age of retirement is still 65 (and pensions are calculated as of that date) any member of the full-time teaching staff may continue, on full salary, until the age of 68 provided that he satisfies the university's medical officer that his health is satisfactory, and a special committee of professors so recommends.

"It is specifically provided, however, that no individual may hold any administrative office, nor may he serve as a member of the Senate after he has passed the age of 65.

"The popularity of this new policy is apparent from the fact that almost all of those who are due to retire in 1958 and 1959 have already indicated their desire to continue until the age of 68."

FEES RAISED

Decision was taken reluctantly during the year under review to raise raise fees for the second consecutive year, and in this connection Dr. James said:

"Although it is too early to predict accurately the financial results of the 1958-59 session, it is estimated that this increase in tuition fees will augment the operating revenue of the university by approximately $600,000.

Africa Requires Help Now Says Missionary Speaker

by ROLANDO DALLA-ROSA

"Come to Africa before it is too late-come over now or never," said the Rev. Nwachoko Eme, speaking at the first session of the World Opportunities Conference, held yesterday afternoon in the Union.

Mr. Eme, who was ordained in the Presbyterian Church in 1952, stressed Africa's need for Western technological aid and for more missionaries. He warned that the Westerner must come with unselfish intentions. "If the Westerner comes with a spirit of service, he is welcome, but if he comes to govern, he is not", said Rev. Eme. "The social changes in Africa are terrific, and now is the time to do something before it is too late."

He also said that the same open frame of mind should be maintained by Western missionaries, adding that the missionary should not try to force Western culture or ideals upon the African. "It is the duty of the missionary to bring Christ to man and then let man choose for himself whether to accept him or not."

Rev. Eme, who is the son of a Ju-Ju witch doctor, also described his conversion to Christianity. He reflected upon the family tradition and tribal superstitions which had opposed his conversion and how his faith in Christianity had maintained him even when he was whipped and practically disowned by his own father.

Rev. Eme was invited to come to Canada from his native Nigeria by the Presbyterian Church of Canada. He is presently doing missionary work in this country besides post-graduate studies at the University of Toronto.

Our Greatest Resource

The annual report of the University was released to the public yesterday. It tells a story which most of us already suspected. McGill is going ahead thanks only to munificent private benfactions. At the same time it has to admit a deficit of $339,926 due to a number of factors, and a confrontation of mounting costs.

In his message, the Principal has this to say about the problems facing McGill:

"If men and women are to make wise decisions — in politics, in business, or in personal affairs — they will need minds trained to think more rapidly and more precisely than was necessary a generation ago. They will also need that degree of education which will enable them to understand the facts — increasingly scientific or technological — on which the decision must be based.

"The environment of human life is changing so rapidly that we can no longer hope to "muddle along" successfully, and the world has become so complex and so interconnected that each of us is affected by the decisions that are made by larger and larger numbers of people. At every level of administration . . . the demand for trained minds is increasing.

"This is why universities are important to Canada. Higher education is no longer a personal luxury for those who can afford it. It would be foolhardy for us to regard education solely as an individual investment from which later income can be derived. Higher education is a national necessity for Canada — or any other country — and the ability of our youth is incomparably the greatest of our national resources".

These words of Dr. James should be cut out by every student and mailed to Mr. Duplessis and the members of his party. Maybe it will help them to realize that by preventing McGill from accepting millions of dollars in federal aid they are doing the greatest harm to the country.

This Is WUS Week

This week is WUS week. To be more specific, this is the week on campus which has been devoted to the World University Service, an international service organization uniting students and faculty around the world. The aim of this programme, sponsored by the local McGill committee of WUS of Canada (or WUSC) is "to educate the students of this campus in some of the operations and functions of this international organization."

The local student committee has planned a busy week. The "Travel Tip" aspect of the programme is something new at McGill and fills a need for students who are planning to travel this summer. To help students with their summer travel plans, WUSC has arranged a series of five noon-hour sessions at which the consuls of Norway, Sweeden (who speaks today), Spain, the West Indies and Germany on the beauties of their respective countries followed by films to substantiate their claims.

The week terminates with an International Weekend sponsored jointly by the newly established Council of International Clubs and WUS. This weekend programme will enable the members of all the various national clubs to discuss some of their many common problems.

It has been a long time since the WUSC committee at McGill has been as active as this year's group. It is about time that the students of McGill realized both the scope and the aims of this organization.

Too Many Beards

To the Editor:

We note with distress the growing prevalence of temporary facial adornment among the males of this University. While admiring the tenacity of those who habitually wear beards, we abhor the frivolous and merceanry attitude of those who have entered the hair-raising competition, fleetingly foreswearing the razor. We strongly feel these activities to be out of place in the august, Royal Institution for the Advancement of Learning.

Apropos this, we wonder what the effect will be on the McGill Dating Service. We shudder to think of the dread impression these prickly patches inflict upon the tender feelings of the members of Royal Victoria College.

More Talk About Women Politicans

I should like to reply to Mr. McLean on my own behalf, and for any others who uphold my opinion.

Firstly, I have heard comment only from men re an SEC woman president. No woman has yet expressed the will to presidency. While women are satisfied with their leadership, they will maintain the status quo. We still have faith in the good judgment of those who have been our leaders — Gameroff, Donolo, Heenan. The have shown themselves capable of the responsibility which a presidency entails. Why are you men creating an issue which does not yet exist?

Hypothetically however, if a woman were to run for the presidency, it might revive a little life in campus politics. Unfortunately, the past years have seen the acclamation of too many candidates to the SEC presidency, as well as most other posts. The "battle of the sexes" has been raging on many fronts —it might prove stimulating to the political world as well.

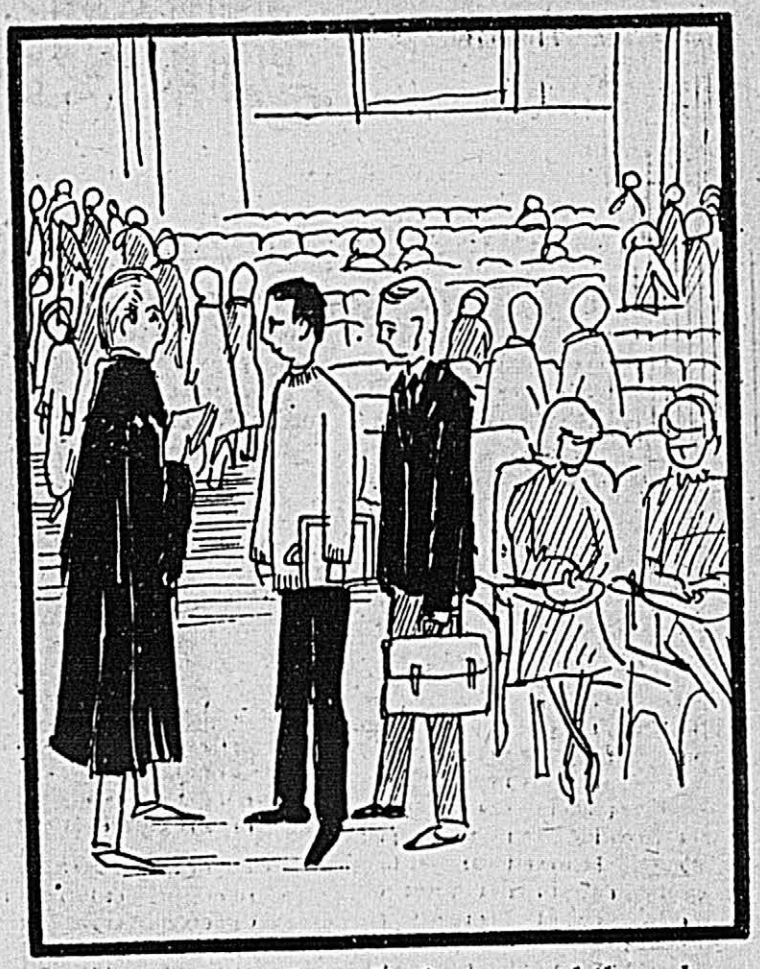

But as for the charge that women are "usurping" the posts that rightfully belong to men, I object! For they are filling a void, left due to the lack, or disinterest of the "men who must be trained to guide our nation." How can these men be developed if they do not even present themselves for election? Why the last two elections to SEC in Arts and Science had only three candidates. Many have been acclamations.

Are the women preventing the future leaders of democracy, the guides of our future, the "masters of our fate" from seeking office? No, they are not usurping places that "should be occupied by men". Rather they are filling the vacuum caused by our lost leaders.

As for the statement that "women have no place in university," it is unworthy of discussion.

An Answer From The Females

To the Editor:

Because of the work which is the least important of our activities, it has taken us some time to reply to the editorial of February 3rd on women students. We do not deny that some people work only to remain in college, but we do deny that this applies to most women or to more women than men. The Daily backs up its reasoning by saying most women intend immediate marriage. In the first place, the statement itself is a vast exaggeration, and, in the second place, recent studies made in Britain show that while a typist or factory girl almost always looks on marriage as a release from work, the reverse attitude is felt by women in academic and professional positions, and far more of these educated women carry on through marriage. In fact, many of us would have a far harder time to get through university if one parent had either no income or that of a high school graduate.

The writers have some familiarity with both Europe and New England and can assert that most finishing schools have been turned into homes for refugee children or two-year vocational colleges, respectively. The only art academies we know of are both dedicated and co-educational.

In answer to the last paragraph, we can only say that if intelligence and ambition replaced financial requirements for university, we believe that, while some present students would be out, the increase in numbers of out-of-town, graduate, and professional women would greatly reduce the present male majority at McGill.

The Jaundiced Eye

Take Charge Guys!

By Ian Binnie
News Editor

Man these take-charge guys are the nuts, no kidding. The place is so lousy with them it looks more like a training ground for the Ladies' Aid than a University.

They've got organizations to organize everything from "old-fashioned" religion to the pancake toss annually sponsored by the Brotherhood of Graduate Nurses. Their Golden Rule is Parkinson's Law and the Organization Man their Sacred Cow. They spend their time putting on high class intellectual orgasms with snob-appeal and the hell of it is they think we're interested.

Every time you look around the Daily's yapping about some big student-insurrection in Timbucktoo and sound trucks are bellowing about the place and the Debating Union's plugging Eleanor Roosevelt as write-in candidate for Carnival Queen and the six student Presidents are meeting again and George in the Tuck Shop is passing out applications. It's enough to make a man eat his children.

We don't say there's nothing in it at all 'cause some of these activities are real great. Like for instance we're figuring on maybe growing a beard for Carnival and all that.

But what really bugs us are these souped-up jam sessions like the Model United Nations. Now why would they want to go and put something like that on for? All them turkeys sitting around discussing world problems and international-scene issues and all that jazz. If they snafued a summer job or something out of it that's different but they don't and so what's their racket? The way it is now they're just passing the time of day shooting the breeze with Mike Pearson and Sidney Smith and all the wheels about things like Berlin and all that and so the Commies take over and so what? We don't live there.

And then along comes the Red and White Revue with a show that sends all the phonies raving up the wall and the Blood Drive sucks all your blood and Combined Charities swipes your dough and the Redmen Band bursts your eardrums and the Annual doesn't print your picture and the only good thing is Saturday night on the town which has nothing to do with McGill except that you're not there and glad of it too.

Anyway to get back to the main point, the organization men have taken over the joint and it's high time some sensible no-nonsense guys did something about it. Like we mean what do these take-charge guys think a university is anyways? A hotbed of intellectualism?

College is just a place where we come to learn how to make a little dough and meet a nice broad and marry her and settle back into a nice steady job with lots of holidays and fringe benefits. In Canada us university students is mature, not crazy college punks who think they can change the world. These organization men keen on thinking and all that jazz should go over to Europe and flip busses on the Champs d'Elysses and get shot tear gas at by gendarmes. Just as long as they keep away from here.

You gotta face the facts. We're at McGill to get a scrap of paper called a degree and till we do there's no sense in trying to snatch a little outside thought on the side because that's a sure way to flunk your year and get the old boot.

These guys gotta realize that universities is academic trade schools where memorized facts and plagiarized opinions is the real thing. Any take-charge guy who figures on thinking big deal thoughts and participating in stuff is stupid and don't belong.

Want to go to a show?

City Councillor Gives Local Students Hell

City Councillor Frank Hanley, also a member of the Provincial Parliament, is coming to McGill to "give the students hell."

Mr. Hanley, told the Daily yesterday that he wishes to represent student interests in the Quebec Legislature. He pointed out, however, that his sympathy for the students has been greatly diminished by such actions as "causing riots, interfering in the CBC strike, throwing eggs at the Legislature, and going against the Constitution (by asking for federal grants to universities)".

Late last night the "Man from St. Ann's" called from Quebec City to ask the president of the Debating Union for permission to include in his introductory remarks "a vitally important announcement".

Although the exact subject matter of the additional announcement will be withheld till Tuesday, when it can reach a wider audience through the city press and television, Mr. Hanley intimated that one aspect of the information will pertain to the proposed Ecumenical Congress, the Cardinal's labour plan, students, and industrialists.

The president of the Debating Union today assured the Daily that he had given Mr. Hanley permission to make his announcement at the McGill meeting next week.

Students Criticize Government Plan

VANCOUVER (CUP) — A system under which the British Columbia government will pay part of the fees of above-average university students was criticized in Vancouver yesterday.

UBC students said they would seek a meeting with Education Minister Peterson to criticize the scheme.

Student leaders said awarding money for marks was "only clouding the real issue" — that the university needs more money to operate more effectively.

The plan was announced by Premier Bennett in his budget speech Friday. The government will pay half the fees of first-class students in senior matriculation to University of B.C. and Victoria College.

It will also pay one-third of the fees of the top 2,000 students in the second-class bracket — 65 to 80 per cent marks.

Neville Scarfe, dean of the UBC College of Education, said that refusal by the government to pay the $2,000,000 requested would mean less money for the faculty and result in "dulled" enthusiasm.

After a meeting of the university student council its President Chuc Connaghan, said:

"The spectacular nature of the gavernment fee-sharing scheme clouds the real issue involved — that is, the government refused to give the university the money it needs to operate effectively next year.

"By its refusal, the government will force the board of governors to raise fees upwards of $100 to pay less than competitive salaries to the faculty."

Eakin Reps Canada

by ED BIERBRIER

Gael Eakin, a second year Arts student, was named to the Canadian International Ski team to represent Canada in the Ladies International Ski Meet being held in Lake Placid on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, of this week. Anne Bushell, chairman of the ladies committee of the Laurentian Zone made the announcement yesterday.

Miss Eakin was one of the six skiers to dominate the Ryan Cup giant slalom at Mont Tremblant last Sunday. A class B skier, she placed third in the competition over the weekend.

When the action shifts to Lake Placid this weekend, the Women's Internationals, an Eastern Canada vs. United States meet, will have the Kate Smith Trophy as its top prize.

ACTIVE ON CAMPUS

For the past three seasons she has been on the soccer team and this year was elected soccer president for the current year. She is a member of the Intercollegiate Women's Ski team, and has represented McGill in the Laurentian Zone races.

She designed this year's Winter Carnival Poster, and has contributed cartoons to the Daily including the one which appears on page two of today's issue.

This fall our nineteen year old sophomore was elected as a non-resident Member At Large placing herself on the Women's Union Executive. Gael also belongs to the Red Wing Society.

Pugilists Vie Championships

Coach Bert Light's McGill boxing team, fresh from an upset over Dartmouth College are in the midst of training for the Canadian Intercollegiate Boxing Championships which will take place in Kingston on February 21.

Boxers are still required in the 135, 150, 165 lb. classes. Glen Edwards, who has little experience is expected to replace Rockingham in the 165 lb. bracket. Although Coach Light hopes that Brian Cowan will fill the void in the 135 lb. category, invitations are extended to anyone else to attend the Tuesday and Thursday practices.

Other boxers who will wear red and white colours are: Grank Maczko, 145 lb., who won in the Dartmouth competition, Don Cochran, 140 lb., Dave Dickinson, Iran Cox.

Skiers Place 8th In Meet

In the recently held Dartmouth Winter Carnival, McGill placed 8th out of ten other universities and colleges. Middlebury received top honours; Dartmouth came second in the competitions. It is generally considered that these are the best colleges in the East.

The top skiers who represented McGill in the Carnival were: Murray Elder, Hugh Harris, Bill Drysdale.

Our best event was the Alpine Combined, in which we placed 3rd in the slalom and 4th in the Downhill. Murray Elder was seventh in the Downhill and Hugh Harris came 8th. In the slalom, Bill Drysdale was 8th and Murray Elder, 10th.

Campbell Elected Lib Veep

Brahm Campbell, President of the McGill Liberal Club, has been elected Quebec Regional Vice-President of the Canadian University Liberal Federation.

At the Federation's recent convention held in Ottawa Tom Sommerville, of Osgoode Hall succeeded Jean David of the McGill Law School as president. Morris Fish, President of the Debating Union, placed second in the oratorial contest which had as subject "Has Social Security in Canada Gone far Enough?"

Representatives of 37 campus Liberal Clubs attended the seminar in connection with the Convention to discuss Social Security in Canada. The Hon. Lester B. Pearson and the Hon. Paul Martin spoke to the delegates.

Hockey Femmes Whitewashed 5-0

by CECILE KALIFON

Mac whitewashed our hockey femmes 5-0 at the Winter Stadium to hand the Red and White their first loss in inter-city play this year. It was learned after the game that the entire McGill intermediate team had volunteered to referee this exciting contest and only after drawing lots were John McDonald and Hal Shapiro given their place in the spotlight. Ron Murphy turned in the best performance of the evening as timekeeper in this crucial test, while Coach Dave Copp starred behind the bench.

The game was typical of other Mac-McGill outings: The McGill team looked good on the ice while the Mac team glistened on the scoresheet. All Mac goals came as a result of a few defensive lapses around the nets. Trinky Hooker and Nancy Reid each countered a pair for the Aggies while Sally Kemp added a singleton to the debacle. Marg Robertson, Andy Lough and Linda L'Aventure carried the puck well except forgot to put it into the Mac nets. Jannice Halls one of the top McGill forwards was not in the lineup and her presence was greatly missed.

Mac jumped off to an early lead in the first period and never looked back as four more goals roared past the two alternating goalies Peggy Maclean and Val Gibbons. McGill failed to capitalize on an excellent opportunity in the first period and perhaps that was the turning point of the game. From then on the home team opened up and that was exactly to the liking of the Aggies.

The two referees were so bewildered in their new role as hockey officials that they failed to call a single penalty in the event that it would outrage the hockey femmes. Perhaps they were only following a precedence set by other officials who have sent only one girl to the cooler in three years.

A return match against Macdonald College will held on February 25 out in Ste. Anne de Bellevue. In the meantime the femmes, having made a careful study of the visitor's team, will reorganize their attack and defense with hopes of taking revenge.

Launch Fund For New Music Hall

A fund for the construction and development of a new Conservatorium of Music for McGill is to be launched. A gala concert and a Black and White Ball will be held for this purpose in January, 1960.

The events, to be organized by Dr. Ellen Ballon, have been approved by the board of governors. It is hoped to hold the event every year.

Dr. F. Cyril James stated: "One of the university's important faculties needs greater financial resources if the conservatorium is to continue to fulfill its important function in the cultural evolution of the city and the nation." He went on to say that the faculty of music, under Dean Marvin Duchow, has expended rapidly and the present building has been inadequate for some time.

Dr. Ballon will be the soloist at the first concert and the orchestra is to be led by an internationally known conductor who has not yet been named.
